

ServSafe Certification

The State University of New York at Delhi is offering an eight-hour ServSafe certification course. The ServSafe food safety certification program is recognized by more jurisdictions than any other manager food safety program in this country. That is because ServSafe is the highest standard in training and certification. It is a mindset and the means to ensure your operation does the right thing - protecting your customers and your business.

The ServSafe Food Safety Certification Program is the most widely accepted food safety program among local, state and federal health departments and is valid for five years.

Course Objectives

- Name the major groups of microorganisms of importance to Foodservice Sanitation.
- Identify and discuss environmental conditions influencing microbial growth.
- Discuss the microbial growth curve and time factors related to growth.
- Identify selected, specific microorganisms associated with food.
- Discuss sources of microorganisms which contaminate foods.
- Discuss food preservation and the impact that it has on microorganisms associated with that food.
- Discuss food spoilage and identify some of microorganisms most frequently involved in spoilage.
- Describe major mechanisms involved in controlling microorganisms, stressing time/temperature factors and proper cooling.
- Discuss appropriate methods of pest control and garbage storage.
