Citing your sources gives credit where credit is due. The purpose of this guide is to give you an introduction to the standards for citing sources in the American Psychological Association (APA) format. Before using this guide, make sure APA is your professor’s preferred format. For more examples, refer to the Publication manual of the American Psychological Association, available at Ref BF76.7.P83 2010, consult their website: http://www.apastyle.org/ or refer to the “Cite Your Sources” section of our website: http://www.delhi.edu/library/. All examples on this handout include a page number indicating where examples can be found in the Publication manual of the American Psychological Association handbook located in the libraries reference section.

Citations – In Text When you cite a work in your text, it refers the reader to your bibliography or list of references so he or she can acquire the full reference information. General Rule: (Author’s last name, year, p. #) If the author’s name is mentioned in the paragraph, you only list the date in parentheses after the author’s name (APA Manual p. 174). A Work by Two Authors: Cite the names of both authors every time their work is referenced in the text. Three to Five Authors: The first time that you cite the work use the last name of all the authors; for subsequent citation’s use first author’s name followed by “et al.”, which stands for “and others”. For more than Five authors, use the first author’s name, followed by “et al” (APA Manual p. 175).

Examples:
1. “Taboo language, then, enters into a startling array of human concerns, from capital crimes in the Bible to the future of electronic media” (Pinker, 2007, p. 325).
2. Pinker (2007) has argued that the study of swear words provides a glimpse of human nature.
3. Kramer, Higgins, Maxwell, and Todd (2010) studied monkeys who had all been given typewriters…
4. Kramer et al. (2010) later concluded that moneys given typewriters could not produce master works on par with playwrights like William Shakespeare.

List of References: Having been referred to your list of references by your in-text citation, the reader will look for the author (listed in alphabetical order), and then the year of publication.
Books

Examples:

A book with a single author: (APA manual p. 203)

A book by two or more (but fewer than eight) authors: (APA manual p. )

A book by a corporate author: (APA manual p. 205)

A book with an editor: (APA manual)

A chapter in a book: (APA manual p. 204)

An entry in an encyclopedia or reference work: (APA manual p. 204)

An entry in an online reference work: (APA manual p. 205)

An electronic version of a print book: Citing sources in the online environment has presented researchers with many difficulties, such as sources moving or disappearing from the web. To remedy this, some publishers have assigned digital object identifiers (DOIs) to their publications. When a DOI is not available, include the name of the website where the book was accessed. The same rule applies for electronic articles.

• With DOI: (APA manual p. 198)

• Without DOI: (APA manual p. 199, 203)

Periodical articles
General Rule: Author’s last name, Initial(s). (Date). Article title. Periodical Title, volume (issue), inclusive pages.

Examples:
• A journal article: (APA manual p. 198)

• An electronic version of a journal article (with DOI): (APA manual p. )

• Without DOI: (APA manual p. 198-199)

A newspaper article: (APA manual p. 200)

• An online newspaper article: (APA manual p. 200)

Websites, blogs, etc. (APA manual p. 214)
General Rule: Author’s last name, Initial(s). (Date). Document title [type of post, if blog]. Retrieved from http://www.xxxx

It is recommended that students remove the hyperlinks from each url.

Examples:

Last edited on 1/14/14 by JGC